Union Rank and File Ask Only for Extended Peace

By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator.

Washington, D. C. WASHINGTON. - Sitting in the committee room where the hearings on the forthcoming labor bills have been taking place I often have won dered how closely they were being followed by the ranks and file of the union members, Of course, the lenders were listening with cocked ears to every syllable—were they listening with the same cars as the

The reason I ask that is because of a letter I received which

"How can the thousands of union members like myself make people understand that what the leaders of our unions do are not the views of the small fry rank and file members?" He goes on to claim that these "international officers are elected at a convention attended by a certain few. And we who stay at home and pay their salaries by our monthly dues have nothing to say sbout who our national officers are to be or what policies are to be followed. The first inkling we have of what is going on is when we read it in the paper," He points out that people like himself have no huge financial reserves, no way to make themselves heard. "All we want," he insists, is to be "left alone. We want to work. We want to work hard because we are all financially broke. It is our fervent wish that everybody let us alone and let us work in peace."

When I read that letter on the air, another 50-year-old automobile worker (member of a CIO union) wrote in immediately to agree with for is 52 weeks' work in a year (in-cluding one week vacation with who wrote it. That seems common pay), no strikes, no lay-offs and no political sense, combined to make it perhaps the most interesting in the history of the department. Its title is "Science of the tremendous advances which have affected the products of agri-culture during and because of the

and the authors of the some 150 odd articles which it contains are mostly scientists in the department.

Some are staff members of state

I too, wish we could get a secret poll of CIO members on such matters as above, but that is quite improbable - the union leaders would discourage any such vote."

Another listener reminded me of the so-called "Barnes bill" in Massuchusetts to compel unions to file certain statements with the Commonwealth - a bill fought by union leaders - which was carried by so large a majority that observers figured that more than 50 per cent of the members of unions in the Bay state had voted in its favor.

A woman correspondent added her voice in support of the first worker. She wrote: "Men looking for work are trying to avoid jobs where they have to join unions."

Of course, there were many who disagreed. One of the most vehement was a 78-year-old Virginian who began work on the railroad in 1886. He described early days when union ization was just getting under way. He said: "When I joined the Brakemen, it was a crime, In fact, you had to keep it a secret or off went your head," He characterizes the union man who criticizes his leadership as "a parasite glad to get a raise and better working conditions, but who will let the other fellow pay for his fare," An Ohlo union member concurs, saying: "When anyone tells you that they do not have a say in what their officers do, they show no respect whatsoever for the truth, They should attend their meetings and help shape their policies, and don't blame their officers for what is done because it is their own fault."

Obviously, situations differ in different unions.

When the bill is written by congress, I believe it will be so phrased that it will make it possible for the majority of union men he sentiments. He says: "All I ask | it not the majority of the leaders, to

New Polar Lands Mapped; Disarmament Plan Balked

ANTARCTICA:

New Discoveries

The vast frigid Antarctic lying at ine oottom of the world began to take clearer shape as a result of the Byrd expedition. No less than 120,000 square miles of hitherto uncharted wasteland were mapped by naval explorers in the first five weeks of polar operations. Fliers photographed and charted great bays, eight major mountain ranges, more than 20 Islands, 3 Important peninsulas and 2,000 miles of coastland. Most important single discovery was a vast bay cutting deeply into the continent from Franklin Roosevelt sea, It measured 180 miles in length and 120 miles in width.

Now on his fou pedition, Byrd remained sold on the white-capped continent. He asseried that it contains a treasurehouse of raw materials which could supplement U. S. resources depleted during the war.

U.N.:

How to Disarm?

Sick of war, the U. S. and Rusala remained sold on world disarmament, but as the two great powers in conflicting camps, they locked horns on procedure.

The atomic bomb remained the nub of the problem. The U. S. insisted that no adequate system of collective security could be devised until establishment of effective control over A-bombs, long-range rockets and other mass destruction weapons. The Russlans, on the other hand, wanted the U. S. to surrender the A-bomb and disarm at

U. S. milliary experis reason that should the U.S. give up the atomic bomb without securing effective control and scrap ships, airplanes and lanks simultaneously, Russia would have a distinct advantage in cine of future hostilitles since she could quickly remobilize her ground forces. Thus, stripped of effective communication and power, the U.S. would stand empty-handed at the other end of the world.

No responsible official could stomach that prespect.

Under present law, the secretary of state succeeds in such a situation. Elevation of the speaker would permit the advancement of an elective officer, Mr. Truman said.

ONLY WAY OUT.

Some political situations that often seem unexplainable are solved in the light of the following episode: Two farmers had been at "outs" for 20 years. One of them drove over to the line fence one day where he accosted his old enemy neighbor with a husky, "Mawin',

When Richard McFarlane disappeared during World War I, he left his wife, Julia, to raise their two children with the aid of her father-in-law, John I. McFarlane. After a lapse of 25 years, with no word as to whether Richard is dead or alive, Julia is beset with new worries when Ric, now 27, and serving in World War II, shows obvious signs of inheriting his father's recklessness, and Jill, 26, falls in love with Lieut. Spang Gordon, Jill learns from Spang that Ric is paying attention to a divorcee of questionable character and goes to camp to investigate. His tells her he is on duty and unable to see her. CHAPTER VII

"On Saturday night you can see every officer in this place, except the poor guys who get stuck with duty. Every single one, anyway," Lieutenant Stark said, "and about half the married men.

"Even Old Cyanide," Lieuten-ant Crawford put in. "He's over there by the window, polluting the Jill followed the movement of Spang's eyes and saw a tall captain sitting alone. He had reddish hair, turning gray, a leathery skin, cold blue eyes and a grim mouth under a stiff, clipped mustache.

"Go easy, Joe, the enemy is listening," Stark warned. You mean that captain? Who is he?" Jill asked. "His name is Mackey," Stark said in a low voice."

"The boys call him Old Cyanide," Spang explained, "because he has a corrosive tongue and you need a gas-mask when he turns loose a barrage of language on you."

"Old army man," supplied Crawford. "Efficient as hell and just as popular. He was a major before Pearl Harbor, over in the Islands, and they busted him after December seventh. Naturally he's sore, and he takes it out on anybody who gets within ten feet of him."

"He looks lonely," Jill said. "He seems to have collected a few decorations."

"Battle stuff," Spang said, "Last war.'

"He'd be handsome if he didn't have such a bitter face," Jill mused. "He does have a very smart military air."

The three young men simultaneously snapped their shoulders back and straightened their ties, then laughed together.

"Get hold of yourself, Joe, she wasn't even looking at you." "Suppose I have to break my neck now to get to be a captain." They were nice lads, with their sunburned good-natured faces and the stark, white breadth of forehead that marked the line of their garrison caps. Jill laughed with them, walted while they wrangled aminbly over the check. Spang said, "Take off, you fellows. I've got a date with Jill. You really didn't want to catch that bus, did you. Jill?"

"It isn't terribly important," she admitted, smiling at him. You love me, Spang-you know you love me. It shows in your eyes. It's in your

"You're a soft-hearted girl. Old Cyanide's as tough as they make em, and the army makes 'em plenty tough. He thinks all the young officers are upstarts and ninety-day wonders, and he resented being sent here, I've been fold."

"I still think there are chinks in his steel armor. Didn't you have another engagement, Spang? Don't let me upset your plans,"

"I hadn't any plans, except to kill another Saturday night, And even If I had had, they'd be unimportant now that you're here."

So she glowed again, and the world was a lovely place, even with the sodden cloud of war hanging over it and dimming all the future. She would not let it dim the

She said, 'Shall we just walk around and talk or would you like to do something else?"

"There's the officer's club. But it's mostly a big poker game on Saturday nights. I know a little spot out this way where the floor is pretty good. Like dancing?"

"Oh, I'd love dancing," The place, neon-lighted, hid its daytime dinginess under a glitter of

Was he keeping his feelings sternly controlled because, as Julia had said, he had nothing to offer a woman but uncertainty or dread or grief?' Couldn't he see that nothing mattered, not the future, for what was a future if you had a lovely present to remember when it came? Now she had to keep her eyes cool because Spang was looking into them, but what if all the aching hunger in her heart welled up into them, naive and naked and defenseless, for him to see? Spang had seen him, too, His face darkened, and he took her arm to lead her past, but Jill tingled and stiffened with sudden anger. She marched directly up to the startled pair and instantly Ric leaped up and stood stiffly, until Spang made a little gesture and muttered something.

The blonde woman-she wasn't a girl, Jill saw - lifted carefully arched eyebrows. "How do you do, Lieutenant?" she said, smoothly, Ric made the introductions awkwardly. "My sister, Julia McFarlane, Mrs. Calvert. And may I present Lieutenant Gordon?" Jill nodded briefly, her throat tight and aching, as she fought back the young rage with which she had blasted her brother so many "Nice you could get a pass, Ric." she said coldly, "even if you didn" take the trouble to let me know."

"You were out," Ric fumbled, "I thought perhaps you'd gone home," "I haven't gone home. I'll be here in the morning and I'll expect to see you then," 'I don't know about tomorrow. I might be on duty." Ric was angry now. too.

"At least you'll telephone me," Jill said severely. "Nice to have seen you, Mrs. Calvert."

A Fulfillment Of a Dream

Spang made a curl little bow, and they walked away. Jill was trem-bling a little, troubled by this allly fury that had shaken her.

"He lied to me," she said, when they were out in the night again. "But why do I care? Why should It matter to me If he preferred being with that woman instead of me? I suppose it's because I hate seeing some one who belongs to me doing a cheap, dishonest trick, Spang, you didn't tell me she was pretty. It's the same one, isn't it—the woman you told me about?"

"Yes, that's the one. And I don' think she's pretty." Jill warmed a bit at that, and her tautness lessened. They were walking aimlessly now, the blare and glitter of the dance spot behind

"She ten't young, though," she sald spitefully. "She's been around," Spang sald, "She knows what the score is."

it was just a temporary folly." "Ric won't be shipped out for a month, at least. No more quotas coming up. But when he gets into officer's training, he won't have any time for foolishness."

"Let's walk all the way, shall we? Or are you awfully tired?" "No, I like walking. I'm glad you came down, Jill." Spang gathered her arm closer, "Because I may be leaving soon. I've asked for my transfer to active duty. I don't like this desk stuff." "Soon?" Jill repeated in a small, thin voice. "How soon?" "We never know in this army, But an older man can do what I'm doing here, and things are shaping up fast. I want to be in on them."

'You mean you want to fly?" "I'm a filer, Jill. And our air force is getting to be a magnificent thing, and I want to be a part of it. I'll have to get back into training -I want to learn to handle heavy

"I suppose it has to be that way. I'll miss you, Spang. I hope you'll miss me a little."

Spang cleared his throat. "I'll miss you like the devil. But this mess will be over sometime, a year or two, I hope. Jill-wait a minute. . . ." They were on a dimly lighted street, a shabby street, where a tall billboard made a dark rectangle of shadow. Spang drew her back further into the shadow, bent her head back, and kissed her swiftly on the lips. "Keep that for me till I come back, " he said husk-

"I will!" Jill whispered, quivering with breathless happiness from head to foot. "Oh, Spang, I will!" They were silent all the way back to the hotel, but Jill's blood was a tumuit, a singing. Jill groped into the elevator. Through the rose-colored fog that enveloped her she was aware of some one else standing there. That cold-eyed captain Spang had called "Old Cyanide." He was looking at her keenly, and when she stopped at her floor he got out, too, and as she turned to go down the corridor he said, "Miss McFarlane?" Jill stopped, puzzled,

"You are Miss McFarlane, aren't

"Yes, I am Julia McFarlane." "I am Roger Mackey. Pardon me for speaking to you, but I once had some friends named McFarlane -in Tennessee."

Captain Mackey

Asks a Question "I live in Tennessee." She had been right about him. He did look lonely and bewildered; the hardness, the bitterness the young officers had spoken of softened as he smiled at her. There was a girl with hair like yours, and her name was Julia, too," he said.

"My mother, perhaps. She was Julia McFarlane. She married flichard McFarlane, a sort of fourth cousin, I think,

"It was a long time ago," he sald, "but you reminded me of that Julia McFarlane I knew, and then heard your name spoken, so 1 took the liberty of speaking to you. Your mother is quite well?"

"Oh, yes, she's very well. And still very young and lovely looking. we think. I'll be glad to remember you to her, Captain Mackey."

"I doubt if she will remember me. It was all a very long time ago, Before the other war, in fact. But she was one of those women you do not easily forget. Good night, Miss McFarlone." "Good night, Captain Mackey,"

He reminded her of some one, why couldn't she think who it was? She liked him. He wasn't grim at But she forgot him quickly, and it was weeks before she thought of him again, because she was in love and Spang had klased her. Life was wonderful, Thin, lemon-linted dawn was creeping into the east before she fell asleep, Jill waited all morning, wander- stupelying fact. The liny details that ing around the room, frowning at the telephone, but neither Ric nor sahamed, exist in the mansions of Spang called. She grew more impatient by the moment, though she knew that military duty for officers or enlisted men gave little thought to personal destres, and little freedom during the day. But this was Sunday. Ric was avoiding her, of course, And now she would have to go home and make up some vague, comforting lies for her mother, and old John L would look at her with eyes like jet angers and probabe corner her somewhere later and ask her what was going wrong with fire.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Everyone's Life Is Poor Stuff, Too

"The love of a tired, puzzled man who needs her, who comes home to ber at night, is the greatest miracle of all."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS RE there times in every woman's life when 1 L she thinks that unless something unexpected happens she will simply go mad?" asks Mrs. Perry Allen of East St. Louis. "Such a time has come to me and I can tell you it frightens me. I have a nice seven-room, two-story house; we have a car; Perry is steady and affectionate; my mother lives near and is devoted and helpful-and I'm afraid I'll go mad. "I'm sick unto death of putting the same clothes in the washing-machine for the children, and ironing the same clothes and carrying them upstairs, and putting them into the wash again. I'm sick of putting the same pot roast into the same pot, and cutting biscuits with the same cutter, and buying three new dishtowels this week and three pairs of each of the boys next week. I'm sick of my beauty parlor, my book-lending library, my bridge club; I'm sick of giving my husband steak only twice a month, and having him tired and grateful about it; 'my favorite dinner, Mommy.' "And I'm deadly sick," continues this spirited letter, "of kindly advice from older women, who remind me of starvation in Poland and China and practically everywhere else. and I'm sick of being told that if any real sorrow came to me, like Perry dying or one of the boya being killed in the street, how grateful I'd be to go back to where I am today! Of course I worry myself sick every time the children or Perry have colds, or are late for dinner; they are dearer to me than life. But here am, 34, married 10 years, no debts, loving my husband, loving my restless, dirty, troublesome, Lorsy boys-and afraid I'll go mad!"

"Terribly Dull." "Well," the letter finishes in a quieter vein, "just writing this to you has been an enermous relief to me. I'll start the rabbit pot-pie and the creamed carrots in better spirits. I'd like to have crab cocktails for dinner tonight, followed by fat little steaks and fresh asparagus, and ended with my famous baked Alaska. We've had baked Alaska twice in six years. But if it must be rabbit and carrots-so be it. Only-believe me, life can be terribly duli in seven-room suburban house on $4,000 a year, even when you love your husband, buy bonds, go to church Sundays, entertain the bridge club every fourth week and have every Sunday dinner at one or the other mothers" Yes, I know it can, Roberta, and I know how hard it is to carry on so apparently aimless a routine from year to year. But when you get to my age you realize that life is much the same for everyone. Life itself, this queer brief time of sensibility between birth and death, lan't what It seems to be. Nobody has as much fun as you think, Millions of lives know actual want, fear and suffering. Millions of others are like yours, just in the comfortable, dull, safe middle zone. A few thousand seem to escape all that, and the women wear diamonds and take trips on private yachts and have leading parts in movies.

And between them all there is preglous little to choose; that is the make us happy or sad, proud or

DULL AND POINTLESS

Life is so drab, so dull and pointless, complains Mrs. Perry Allen in a letter, that she fears she will go mad unless something unexpected bappens. She has almost everything a woman can rightfully expect; a loving, dutiful busband, two healthy little boys, a suburban bome. The family income is adequate for her needs and there are no bills or other financial worries. Nothing really is wrong, but Mrs. Allen is just weary of the routine of household cares, cooking, marketing and all. Her club connections are not interesting enough to give her much diversion. She is looking for something bizarre to give her a new interest in life. Miss Norris replies that life settles down to a dreary sameness for nearly everyone, in time. Wealth and beauty and fame do not make much difference. The only element, says Miss Norris, that can lift anyone out of monotony and deshair, is religion. A realization of the supernaturel part of life, she says, transforms everything commonplace and makes it sparkle. The dull, daily routine becomes thrilling. Park avenue just as plentifully as they do the crowded tenements of Silver street. Wealth and fame and beauty are only fresh exasperations when they cannot hold a man's loyalty, save a child's life, or build about her the home fireside, the books and friends, the dear sense of being loved and needed that are every voman's dream Supernatural Goal, The history of failures, divorces and suicides among the apparently great and favored prove this over and over. Life-if you I ve it only in terms of this world, is a dull and discouraging business for everyone. Earthly life isn't enough for us, we are geared to something else. We need supernatural help. Once sure of that, there is no more duliness. We are the servants then of an invisible master. Nothing is humble then, nothing is monotonous. Life sparkles; the commonplace seven-room house, the two sturdy boys, the garden, friends, club, market-all combine in one absorbing miracle. And the love of a tired, puzzled man, who needs her, who comes home to her at night, is the greatest miracle of all. To make his life comfortable and complete is a daily and secret delight.

Once you come to feel that dis-Illusionment and drabness are the fate of us all, your own share of it becomes easier to bear. You begin to teach about for that hidden alchemy that transforms life in an ordinary city flat into the most thrilling role a woman can be called upon to play. Believe me, the materials are all there, ready to your hand. Or rather, ready to your heart and soul. A ballroom and a swimming pool don't keep hate and fear and despair out of a house. Income has nothing to do with the Joy of living. That is something for which you must seek as a certain merchant did a certain pearl, knowing that its heavenly luster would light all the rest of his days,
